

TWO (2) WEEKS PRENATAL LEAVE

What You Need to Apply

If you are currently pregnant and have taken or will take leave from work to attend prenatal medical appointments, you can expect to receive benefits for those days. To begin the process, have your doctor complete the Prenatal Medical Certification form. You will need to upload this form during the claim filing process.

Go to dcpaidfamilyleave.dc.gov to download the Prenatal Medical Certification form and to apply.

After you apply, you can expect to hear back from the Office of Paid Family Leave within ten (10) business days.

After You Apply

Once you file a prenatal leave claim, you will be able to easily request payment for more dates of leave that you take to attend prenatal medical appointments during the full length of your pregnancy. We will accept any of the following documents to show that you attended more appointments after you already submitted a claim:

- Medical visit slips from your prenatal appointments
- Visit summary documents from your health care provider
- Letter from your doctor's office showing the dates you received the prenatal medical care
- If it's easier for you, an updated prenatal medical certification form
